ENGLAND'S STOVE WORKS ANNOUNCES NEW NON-CATALYTIC WOOD MODEL

MONROE, VA (February 17, 2003) – England's Stove Works, Inc. (ESW) is announcing the completion of its newest stove model, a non-catalytic model that the company is planning on testing for Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) certification. Bob Dillard, Vice President of ESW, who was actively involved in the development and in-house burn laboratory testing of the new model, said the company plans to unveil the model at the 2003 Hearth Patio and Barbeque Association (HPBA) Expo in Nashville, TN.

“This model will be EPA certified, which is a big plus for dealers who carry our product. It is also a non-catalytic model that can heat up to 1,500 square feet, and features a large viewing area, so it should be very attractive to homeowners.”

Dillard also said that the new unit will come standard with a rear heat shield for closer installation clearances, and the company will offer optional side heat shields, as well as an optional blower system. “The options can be purchased at a later time and installed by the homeowner, if desired, which should allow for dealers of the product to enjoy repeat traffic, while at the same time allowing the homeowner to know that England's Stove Works and those who carry our product are interested in providing everything the homeowner could want in a smaller, cost-effective stove such as this one.”

England's Stove Works, Inc., based in Monroe, VA, is a family-owned business that was started by Bob and Ron England almost 30 years ago. ESW manufactures wood, pellet, coal and gas heating stoves and sells its product nationwide.
