ENGLAND'S STOVE WORKS RECEIVES CERTIFICATION FOR ANOTHER PELLET UNIT

MONROE, VA (February 3, 2003) – England's Stove Works, Inc. (ESW) recently received Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) certification for its "deluxe" freestanding pellet unit, model number 25-PDV/55-SHP22/55-TRP22. The three model numbers are for the company's Englander, Summers Heat and Timber Ridge brand names, respectively.

"After a lot of hard work, testing, and hours and hours of labor, we have accomplished what few other stove manufacturers have done – we have received EPA certification for a pellet unit. And this is our second EPA-certified model," said Ron England, CEO of England's Stove Works, Inc.

Although EPA certification is not required for pellet stove sales in most of the U.S., the certification means that the unit has been tested and approved to stringent EPA standards. "This is not the 'exempt' or 'non-affected facility' pellet stove that most manufacturers offer," said England. "This is a stove that can be sold in Washington State and other areas that require certification, which gives added assurance to those who carry our product, as well as to the homeowner who wants one of the cleanest-burning pellet stoves that he can install in his home."

This model joins England's Stove Works' 25-PDVC/55-SHP10/55-TRP10 model as the second freestanding pellet stove model that has received EPA certification.

England's Stove Works, Inc., based in Monroe, VA, is a family-owned business that was started by Bob and Ron England almost 30 years ago. ESW manufactures wood, pellet, coal and gas heating stoves and sells its product nationwide.
